Photographing Your Home's Walls

1. Using a standard 8.5x11 sheet of paper, tape it to the wall anywhere you'd like to consider a wall art gallery. Or simply measure your wall using two points of reference that are visible in the photo (ie: ceiling to baseboards, couch to ceiling, wall corner to lightswitch, etc.) and take note of these measurements.

2. Step straight back away from the wall and take a photo of the wall including the sheet of paper if applicable. Be sure that your phone is parallel to the wall and is not tipped forward, backward, or to the left or right. This will distort the image and make it more difficult to scale and visualize your artwork.

3. Send the photos and any notes to hello@amberfostersmithphotography.com

For The Best Results:

- Take the photo horizontally, not vertically.
- Face straight at the wall, rather than at an angle to the wall.
- Step back as far away as you're able to when taking your photo.
- Include furniture, other artwork, doorways, or windows in your photo to give you a point of reference for visualizing your artwork on your walls.
